20	Teaching Learning Process	Design understanding is encouraged through individual concept based projects where students would explore the design research, sustainable approaches, rich heritage of interiors, textiles, crafts and clothing development of our country from a range of varied topics spanning time and regions in the world. The department focuses on interdisciplinary research with innovative programs at different levels. Outcome-Based Education (OBE) is a student-centric teaching and learning methodology in which the course delivery, assessment are planned to achieve stated objectives and outcomes. It focuses on measuring student performance i.e. outcomes at different levels.	The teaching-learning process at the institute is designed to foster holistic development through a balanced blend of theoretical instruction and practical exposure. The curriculum is delivered using a learner-centric approach that integrates traditional classroom teaching with experiential learning methodologies such as case studies, live demonstrations, role-plays, simulation exercises, industry immersion programs, and collaborative projects. Emphasis is placed on Outcome-Based Education (OBE), ensuring that students acquire not only domain knowledge but also essential life skills such as communication, leadership, and problem-solving. Regular	Uses a variety of teaching and learning methods, including experiential learning, project-based learning, and seminars, to foster a comprehensive educational experience. We also integrate professional certifications and offer diverse specializations to prepare students for the industry.	Practice-based learning: Each theory course has its own associated lab. Extended lab hours that enhance practice-based learning. A course on professional skill development (PSD) to train students for internship placement including mock interviews from industry experts. Industry-oriented curriculum leading to industry certification (Microsoft / Intel / AWS/ EC Council).

		Design subjects included in the curriculum provide students an opportunity to research on the trends and forecast (with aid of Forecast Database available WGSN) for different seasons and arrive at the solutions using design methodologies. They also incorporate understanding of context, user-requirements and apply the sustainable design practices. Intermittent jury from faculty of other design background and designers from industry help the students to understand the clientele/industry requirement and refine the design as per the inputs received. Workshops/seminars conducted aid in the students gain knowledge and skills from industry experts. Also, visit to the industries/project cites help the students understanding the theoretical aspects as applied in the industry. The student's work is also	guest lectures, workshops, and industry interactions bridge the gap between academia and industry, while internships and on-the-job training provide real-world experience. The teaching-learning process is continually enhanced through feedback mechanisms, the use of ICT tools, and faculty development initiatives to align with the latest global trends in hospitality education encouraged to be published in research medium. Skill enhancement courses like Financial management, entrepreneurship, fashion interiors aid in learning inter-disciplinary learning. Generic electives like languages, hospitality related courses helps the student explore options beyond core and discipline specific subjects. Subjects on craft documentation help the students understand the process of design application from the guilds practicing the art. The documentation also aids in understanding the primary and secondary research process and also application of the craft in design development for the studios. Students also get an opportunity to be a part of consultancy projects along with the faculty members to enhance their practical knowledge.
